COMMUNITY FOUNDATION SOUTHWEST
WASHINGTON

40 years of local giving

Shine
On!

Mary Granger was a tireless visionary who cared deeply for southwest Washington. She found solutions, rallied people and always delivered results.

Forty years ago, she and a caring group of residents founded the Community Foundation. Their dream: To create an enduring source of community support. Since then, we have partnered with hundreds of local donors and businesses to provide $311 million in grants to local nonprofits.

“What we’re doing isn’t just for now. It’s forever.”

MARY GRANGER

The Community Foundation helps transform purpose into impact.

See the difference we make together at cfsww.org/40stories.

Community Foundation for Southwest Washington Celebrates 40 Years of Impactful Philanthropy

Southwest Washington's spirit of generosity is well-documented, but lesser known is a quiet organization that has spent forty years nurturing local giving. The Community Foundation for Southwest Washington is a unique charity that partners with donors to channel support toward nonprofits that address a range of community needs.

The late Mary Granger, a longtime community advocate and philanthropist, was the visionary behind this idea. It started when Governor John Spellman appointed her as a regional representative in 1980. Her tenure began with two recessions in just three years, which left her answering hundreds of calls from people in crisis.

“Welfare was being cut back and people were without food, power and, in some cases, a place to live,” Granger recalled. “They were turning to the governor’s office as a place of last resort.”

When Mary saw a need, she acted. She quickly formed a task force of business and nonprofit leaders. The group held food drives, raised funds for emergency housing and organized free medical care for those in need.

Steeped in the work, Granger recognized that local nonprofits needed sustainable funding to respond to crises. She became aware of the community foundation model and brought the idea forward. The community made it a reality.

Despite the economy, Granger and a group of caring neighbors managed to raise more than $1 million in three years. A decade in, their collective efforts began compounding. Partnerships with major donors and businesses resulted in a long list of transformative projects and programs.

Residents enjoy these philanthropic investments daily at places like Esther Short Park, The Historic Trust, and Firstenburg Community Center. Programs launched through the Community Foundation like Operation Warm Heart, the Principal’s Checkbook Program and Give More 24! have also made an impact and evolved over time.

Today, Granger’s seed of idea has grown beyond what anyone expected. Working with local donors, the Community Foundation for Southwest Washington has facilitated giving and stewarded funds to build a corpus of $385 million for ongoing impact. Closing its fourth decade of operations, the organization has now distributed more than $300 million in grants.

Behind all those dollar signs are hundreds of caring people who have chosen to give through the Community Foundation. To commemorate 40 years of local giving, the Community Foundation is highlighting a number of these stories and contributions on its website. Read more and see the impact at cfsww.org/40stories.

COURAGEOUS CONVERSATIONS: BREAKING THE STIGMA OF MENTAL HEALTH

JOIN US for our upcoming event, Courageous Conversations: Breaking the Stigma of Mental Health, with presenting sponsor NAACP Vancouver. The event will feature a candid conversation with Antonio Salazar-Hobson, a renowned author, lawyer, and mental health advocate. Diana Perez, Vancouver City Councilwoman, will serve as our Emcee. Tickets are $20, but free tickets are available thanks to the generosity of the presenting sponsor, the NAACP of Vancouver.

Salazar-Hobson will discuss his personal story, which explores his life as a migrant farmworker kidnapped at age four, trafficked through age ten at a famous California Ranch, until being saved from an attempted suicide and taken under Cesar Chavez's wing. We will also explore preconceptions and stigmas around mental health and why diverse voices in mental health storytelling are so important.

In telling his story, Salazar-Hobson aims to offer hope in desperate circumstances by sharing the legacy of his family and reflecting on the dignity and sacrifices of their difficult Chicano life. Salazar-Hobson's unique story of strength and resilience provides an enduring example of hope to a large audience and a model for abused and trafficked children so that they can survive and protect their own ability to love.

Stories and open discussions about mental health bring to light mental health-related issues and how they appear in everyday life. Listening to others' experiences serves as the initial step toward positive change. Actively engaging in listening to others' stories with the aim of fostering empathy and personal development can spark conversations about challenges faced and broaden our perspectives on mental health.

"For far too long, people have been ashamed to talk about their mental health or substance-use struggles," said Columbia River's Jackson. "Keeping them secret or not seeking treatment out of fear of being judged, ridiculed, or losing their job or family. The shame and fear have to stop for our community to heal. It is critical to start the conversation and keep it going."

By purchasing a ticket and attending Columbia River's Courageous Conversations event, you're supporting this important dialogue. Join us at 12:30 p.m. on October 25 at Clark College: Gaiser Hall and help start a conversation to break mental health stigmas today.

CLARK COUNTY

Motto: Proud Past, Promising Future

Clark County packs a lot into its 656 square miles: seven cities (and part of an eighth), rural landscapes, urban cityscapes, unique neighborhoods, great schools, active volunteers, strong environmental stewardship, thriving businesses, friendly people, mild climate and year round outdoor recreation opportunities.

With its pristine beauty, natural resources and mild climate, this area has always attracted people—from the native tribes of ancient times, to the era of explorers and settlements, and now the modern days of continued growth and industry.

The county's recent history can be characterized by "growth, growth and more growth" in population, jobs and housing. In fact, Clark County is one of the fastest growing counties in the state of Washington and continues to attract newcomers.

86 YEARS

PROVIDING FOR THE VANCOUVER
COMMUNITY

The need has never been greater and your help is needed.
You are our village.

At Vancouver St. Vincent de Paul, volunteers and staff aid people experiencing homelessness and hunger.

Individuals experiencing homelessness receive a non-perishable lunch bag daily, with clothing and toiletries also available. Full-service food assistance is open to all Washington residents. These services are all made possible by partnering with other community members, such as the Clark County Food bank, several supporting Catholic parishes and various community donors.

Often, homeless camps are disbanded and belongings may be collected, discarded and, at times, stolen from homeless encampments. Our Society has an 86-year history in Vancouver, providing and caring for the needs of homeless and marginalized people. While food banks and social service agencies work to address this pressing issue, the need for assistance is at an all-time high.

OUR NEEDS INCLUDE

- Pop-open cans of meat or protein
- Peanut butter
- Granola or protein bars
- Canned ready-to-serve soups

- Hygiene items, including bar soap, small toothpaste, deodorant, toilet paper, feminine hygiene products, disposable razors

Get ready for all the fun you love—and some exciting new activities to keep your kids entertained and smiling! Play is so much more than just fun; it's an essential building block for brain development, laying the foundation for future learning. By engaging in play, you're not just passing the time—you're investing in your child's cognitive growth and potential.

Don't underestimate the power of play! Research continues to show that play is vital for a child's social, emotional, intellectual, and physical growth. A recent report from Nike underscores how important movement is for children, stating:

"Nature designed children to be perpetual motion machines for a reason. As they transition into adolescence, they're shaping the blueprints for their adult lives—not just physically, but in terms of intellect, character, emotional resilience, and social skills. Their preferences and motivations are forming during this critical developmental phase."

At Columbia Play Project, we recognize that movement is key to raising healthy, happy kids. That's why we always incorporate physical activity into our Children's Museum events. But we also know that a quiet corner where your child can pretend, dream, and create is just as valuable. Whether they're building an imaginary world, crafting their own stories, or letting their creativity flow, these moments of calm are just as essential for growth as physical play. Whatever form it takes, keep fostering both active and imaginative play to support your child's overall development!

We are incredibly grateful to our supporters including Fourth Plain Community Commons, Kind Hearts Free Spirits Foundation, William E. Wockner Foundation, REI, and Those Yarn Girls. Their generosity allows us to offer enriching, joyful experiences at no cost to our community. Thank you for helping us make play possible for everyone!

CLARK COUNTY

Motto:
Proud Past, Promising Future

Clark County packs a lot into its 656 square miles: seven cities (and part of an eighth), rural landscapes, urban cityscapes, unique neighborhoods, great schools, active volunteers, strong environmental stewardship, thriving businesses, friendly people, mild climate and year round outdoor recreation opportunities.

With its pristine beauty, natural resources and mild climate, this area has always attracted people--from the native tribes of ancient times, to the era of explorers and settlements, and now the modern days of continued growth and industry.

EXPANDED VITAL SERVICES FOR FOSTER FAMILIES

Fosterful, a locally based nonprofit dedicated to helping those affected by foster care, is thrilled to announce a significant expansion of services starting December 1, 2024. This initiative comes as the organization reassesses its focus in light of recent changes to the state child welfare system.

Foster care is a journey of both growth and change. For foster parents, welcoming a new child into their home means a flurry of activity—reconfiguring car seats, juggling work schedules, coordinating sports activities, therapies and childcare. It’s a whirlwind that highlights just how essential community support is. As Founder and Executive Director Sarah Desjarlais puts it, “Caregivers need their community surrounding them with love, understanding, tangible resources, and helping hands. They shouldn’t have to do this alone.”

Yet, the path of foster care isn’t just about new beginnings. It’s also about goodbyes. When children transition back to their families or move on to new placements, foster parents often experience deep emotional waves of grief. “As a community, our job is to bear witness to the grief, and provide relief when we can,” emphasizes Desjarlais.

Since its founding in 2013, Fosterful has grown from a small initiative into a vital resource, serving 27 communities across two states in just six years. But like many organizations, Fosterful faced challenges during the pandemic, leading to the difficult decision to slowly close satellite locations. This shift has allowed the team to concentrate their efforts on expanding services right here in Southwest Washington.

With the upcoming expansion, nearly 500 children and their caregivers—whether they are foster parents or relatives—will soon have access to a range of wraparound support. Services will include Resource Concierge and Case Management, in-home Behavioral Case Aide support, Respite Care planning, and a 24/7 phone coaching service for caregivers.

“Expanding our services is the next right step for Fosterful,” shares Desjarlais. “We believe that with the right support, all children and families navigating the foster care system can thrive.”

As the community unites behind this mission, Fosterful is excited about the positive changes ahead. Together, they aim to create a nurturing ecosystem where every child can feel safe, loved, and ready to flourish.

If you are providing out-of-home care to a relative or youth in foster care, and would like more information about how Fosterful can help, email info@fosterful.org.

Since 2015 we, along with other Lions members, have been instrumental in screening over 50,000 individuals, mostly children and youth in the Clark County area. Of that total, 5,000 were referred to eye-care professionals for more detailed screening.
